WORKING CONDITIONS

(Working Conditions identify the unusual and unavoidable, externally imposed conditions under which the work must be performed and which create hardship for the incumbent.)

Physical Demands

As typically associated with office positions.

Environmental Conditions

The incumbent will spend 25% of their day in client homes where the incumbent may be (and often is) exposed to unsanitary conditions, pets, cigarette smoke and loud noises which may make the incumbent sick (i.e. allergies).

In addition, the incumbent will be exposed to all weather conditions (ranging from -40 to +30) when driving to and from client’s homes. The constant changes in temperature (office - vehicle - home - vehicle - etc.) may make the incumbent sick.

For 25% of their shift an incumbent may be exposed to communicable diseases, blood and body fluid that can result in potential health risk to the incumbent.

The rest of the day will be spent on administrative duties within an office setting.

Sensory Demands

This position requires a high degree of concentration and attention to detail but can also expect numerous and continues interruptions during the working day. The incumbent can be called upon at any given time to attend various situations and/or locations.

Working within the client home may be extremely distracting and make normal assessment and diagnosis more difficult as these settings may be distracting for both the incumbent and the patient (noise level, family interruptions, visual commotion, etc.).

Focused attention to verbal and non-verbal communication of potentially volatile, difficult, intoxicated and verbally and/or physically abusive clients.

The remainder of the day will be spent on administrative duties within an office setting where the incumbent may be required to focus on a computer terminal.

Mental Demands

The RCC has the opportunity to develop relationships with the clients of the Home Care Program. The RCC is expected to remain calm, controlled and professional, regardless of the situation and demonstrate compassionate care to the client, family and other members of the health care team. The RCC is required to support a peaceful and dignified death of those residents that may cause significant emotional stress.
There is uncertainty in knowing what to expect while at work, especially in uncontrolled settings (i.e. home visits). There is legitimate concern about risk of verbal or physical assault and unknown and unpredictable situations (i.e. patients or family members under the influence of alcohol, demanding and confrontational family members).

Within the health care setting there can be significant lack of control over the work pace, with frequent interruptions that may lead to mental fatigue or stress. The incumbent must make decisions quickly that could have far reaching effects on the client's well-being. Conflicting priorities and very short deadlines place mental demands on the incumbent.
