Department	Position Title
Northwest Territories Health and Social Services Authority	Case Aide
Position Number	Community	Division/Region
48-17351	Tuktoyaktuk	Child, Family and Community Wellness / Beaufort Delta

PURPOSE OF THE POSITION

The Case Aide provides casework assistance to Family and Community Social Workers and work directly with children, youth, and families served through Child, Family and Community Wellness. The Case Aide will play a supporting role in the delivery of services to families, assisting with day to day case management support, and supporting permanency planning, family re-unification, placement, along with other duties as they present.

SCOPE

The Northwest Territories Health and Social Services Authority (NTHSSA) is the single provider of all health and social services in the NWT, with the exception of Hay River and Tłıchʔ regions, covering 1.2 million square kilometers and serving approximately 43,000 people, including First Nations, Inuit, Metis, and non-aboriginals. Health and social services includes the full range of primary, secondary and tertiary health services and social services including family services, protection services, care placements, mental health, addictions, and developmental activities, delivered by more than 1,400 health and social services staff.

While the Tłıchʔ Community Services Agency will operate under a separate board and Hay River Health and Social Services Agency will in the interim, the NTHSSA will set clinical standards, procedures, guidelines and monitoring for the entire NWT. Service Agreements will be established with these boards to identify performance requirements and adherence to clinical standards, procedures, guidelines and policies as established by the NTHSSA.

Under the direction of the Minister of Health and Social Services, the NTHSSA is established to move toward one integrated delivery system as part of the government's transformation strategy.

Colonization has a continuing and profound impact on NWT Indigenous families today; therefore, all positions play a role in promoting and supporting a system-wide shift towards prioritizing early childhood development, culturally-based prevention, and family and community-driven programming that supports the health and wellbeing of all families in the NWT and supports families who are struggling with multiple barriers to safely staying together.

Cultural Safety is an outcome where Indigenous peoples feel safe and respected, free of racism and discrimination, when accessing health and social services. Relationship-based care is fundamental to cultural safety because it prioritizes the need for trusting, caring and ongoing relationships between patients and clients with providers. Embedding a culturally safe approach in Health and Social Services (HSS) has been identified as critical to supporting equitable access to care with the long term goal of improving health outcomes for Indigenous peoples.

For Indigenous residents of the NWT, who represent over 50% of the population, these shifts are particularly significant because despite some improvements over time, there remains significant disparities in their overall health status in comparison to non-Indigenous residents. Health disparities are largely attributed to inequalities in the social determinants of health, which for Indigenous residents include the legacies of colonization and systemic racism. Indigenous families and their children are disproportionately overrepresented in the Child and Family Services (CFS) system. Most of the children who are involved with Child and Family Services are Indigenous, a fact that can be attributed both to the historical legacies and systemic racism as mentioned above, but also to the lack of culturally safe and accessible supports. These factors have impacted the way health and social services are delivered and accessed by Indigenous peoples in the NWT, contributing to additional complexities in Indigenous health disparities. When Indigenous peoples feel culturally safe after interacting with staff in the HSS system they are more likely to access care when needed, leading to improved health outcomes. This position requires the incumbent to honour and promote a culturally safe environment at all times.

Located in Tuktoyaktuk, the Case Aide reports to, and is supervised by the Regional Supervisor, Child and Family Services, and is responsible for providing services such as transporting clients to appointments, providing escorts for children/youth as required, conducting home visits related to both prevention and protection services, supervising access visits, ensuring timely documentation, researching information, coordinating case conferences and cultural activities, attending meetings, providing referrals, drafting reports and assisting with other duties as and when required.

This position provides the supporting work necessary to ensure the child's connection with their family and community, and assists Family and Community Social Workers (Social Workers) in completing a variety of standard casework tasks, including but not limited to, the service of documents, supervising/facilitating visits, completion of case notes and other documentation, and facilitating appointments and meetings. Casework tasks include a combination of administrative tasks and direct client contact.

The legacies of colonization, assimilation policies such as residential schools, have impacted

Indigenous health outcomes and the way health and social services are delivered and accessed. This position requires the incumbent to practice from a perspective that is trauma- and violence-informed, anti-oppressive, strengths-based and family centered approach and the position requires that interaction with clients and families, community members, partners and colleagues is tactful, respectful and humble.
