Department	Position Title
Northwest Territories Health and Social Services Authority	Community Social Services Worker IV
Position Number	Community	Division/Region
48-2016	Norman Wells	Child, Family and Community Wellness/Sahtu

PURPOSE OF THE POSITION

The Community Social Services Worker IV (CSSW) is responsible for the effective and efficient delivery of Child and Family Service programs in the Sahtu region of the Northwest Territories. The incumbent provides these varied prevention and protection services in order to support children, youth and families within the territory. This position works within the context of the vision, mission and values of the Northwest Territories Health and Social Services Authority (NTHSSA) and the Social Worker Code of Ethics through the Canadian Association of Social Workers (CASW).

SCOPE

The Northwest Territories Health and Social Services Authority (NTHSSA) is the single provider of all health and social services (HSS) in the Northwest Territories (NWT), with the exception of Hay River and Tłı̄chǫ regions, covering 1.2 million square kilometers and serving approximately 43,000 people, including First Nations, Inuit, Metis, and non-aboriginals. HSS includes the full range of primary, secondary and tertiary health services and social services including family services, protection services, care placements, mental health, addictions, and developmental activities, delivered by more than 1,400 HSS staff.

While the Tłı̄chǫ Community Services Agency (TCSA) will operate under a separate board and Hay River Health and Social Services Agency (HRHSSA) will in the interim, the NTHSSA will set clinical standards, procedures, guidelines and monitoring for the entire NWT. Service Agreements will be established with these boards to identify performance requirements and adherence to clinical standards, procedures, guidelines and policies as established by the NTHSSA.

Under the direction of the Minister of Health and Social Services, the NTHSSA is established to move toward one integrated delivery system as part of the government's transformation strategy.

Cultural safety is an outcome where Indigenous peoples feel safe and respected, free of racism and discrimination, when accessing health and social services. Relationship-based care is fundamental to cultural safety because it prioritizes the need for trusting, caring and ongoing relationships between patients and clients with providers. Embedding a culturally safe approach in Health and Social Services has been identified as critical to supporting equitable access to care with the long term goal of improving health outcomes for Indigenous peoples.

For Indigenous residents of the NWT, who represent over 50% of the population, these shifts are particularly significant because despite some improvements over time, there remains significant disparities in their overall health status in comparison to non-Indigenous residents. Health disparities are largely attributed to inequalities in the social determinants of health, which for Indigenous residents include the legacies of colonization and systemic racism. Indigenous families and their children are disproportionately overrepresented in the Child and Family Services (CFS) system. Most of the children who are involved with Child and Family Services are Indigenous, a fact that can be attributed both to the historical legacies and systemic racism as mentioned above, but also to the lack of culturally safe and accessible supports. These factors have impacted the way health and social services are delivered and accessed by Indigenous peoples in the NWT, contributing to additional complexities in Indigenous health disparities. When Indigenous peoples feel culturally safe after interacting with staff in the Health and Social Services system they are more likely to access care when needed, leading to improved health outcomes.

The incumbent is accountable to the Regional Manager, Child & Family Services who is located in Norman Wells. The position is located in Norman Wells and reports directly to the Regional Supervisor, Child and Family Services (Supervisor). The incumbent is expected to consult with their supervisor/manager on a regular basis. Other resources that they need to collaborate with to provide community supports include RCMP, Mental Health, Health Services, Income Assistance, the local Indigenous group, along with other stakeholders. The CSSW IV must develop positive working relationships with the various resources to provide optimum services to the children, youth and families with whom they work with.

The CSSW IV plays a key role in planning, consulting, developing, making referrals and coordinating activities relevant to case plans related to prevention, protection, permanency, placement and family reunification. In addition this position is required to have consistent ongoing contact with foster parents and other caregivers. The caseload carried by the CSSW IV averages 11 families. The incumbent will be required to participate in the Family Court processes as necessary which would include preparing documents related to Child and Family Service cases such as drafting affidavits and presenting information in court.

The incumbent at times may be required to provide direct service delivery in several other program areas including Adult Services, Mental Health and Wellness, Family Violence

Program and will be required to respond to any emergency situation in the community such as natural disasters or other critical incidents. The day-to-day workload is often crisis oriented, unpredictable and chaotic by nature and further exacerbated by tight deadlines which are imposed by legislation. The incumbent is typically the public's first contact with the child and family services team and as such it is expected that they will present themselves to the public in a professional, and courteous manner. They are required to adhere to applicable legislation, the Canadian Social Work Code of Ethics as well as policies and standards developed by the NTHSSA and the Department of Health and Social Services.

- All Employees play an active role in Workplace Health and Safety through their daily activities in identifying risk, prevention and accidents, and applying timely corrective measures.
- A healthy workplace, where employees can provide quality service under safe conditions, is the right thing to do.

WORKING CONDITIONS

Physical Demands

Child removal requires the lifting and carrying of children and possessions during child placements and apprehensions. This occurs on a frequent basis and takes approximately 30 minutes and up to 50 lbs. per child.

During apprehension's the stress level is very high and the threat of physical confrontation with clients who are high risk and may be intoxicated or under the influence of substances occurs approximately up to 5 times per month for a high degree of intensity.

The incumbent will receive calls after hours, weekends and statutory holidays and will need to respond immediately to situations. This disrupts normal sleep patterns, causes fatigue and impacts work life balance and can also contribute to negative health outcomes.

Due to the heavy administrative duties there is also prolonged use of telephones and computers during normal working hours. This is on an ongoing daily basis for upwards of 7.5 hours per day.

Environmental Conditions

The incumbent works in a busy office where there is exposure to communicable diseases; this rate of exposure increases when engaged in direct case management with clients i.e. home situations and seeing clients/parents in office.

The incumbent is required to live in a northern community, and is required to travel in small aircraft or winter road (ice road) to other communities. There is risk of being 'weathered' in during certain times of the year. As well some communities have limited amount of amenities (food, hotel, etc.).

Moderate travel 6 to 8 times per year.

Sensory Demands

There is a high daily intense frequency to provide focused listening and observation for verbal and nonverbal communications during interviews, meetings, court proceedings and interactions with children, youth, young adults and adults. The intensity is high because emotional situations can distort communications. This can result in misunderstanding, misinterpretation and miscommunication and have a significant negative impact on children and families and create risk to the incumbent.

Mental Demands

The incumbent will be required to make decisions impacting the lives of children, youth and families during times of intense stress. These situations are often unpredictable as the parties are highly likely to be agitated and may be under the influence of substances. This creates hostile situations that can quickly pose a significant safety risk. This can occur on a weekly basis.

The incumbent both hears and experiences a high level of trauma on a daily basis which contributes to their own vicarious trauma. Clients and families will share their stories of residential school, 60s scoop, being in the child welfare system and the abuse and trauma experienced. The CSSW IV will need to understand the traumatic history and work towards reconciliation in a culturally safe and anti-racist manner and as such may experience inner conflict and guilt.

They will need to work with various high-risk clients including those who have committed violent acts of physical and sexual assault, those who struggle with serious mental health illness, etc.

The incumbent may experience threats made by parents/family toward them during both work and off hours, including in person.

Unscheduled after hour call-backs are disruptive to incumbent's sleep and work life balance and can lead to health-related issues.
